Civilization, Oriental and Occidenta

When we hear of the popular commotion which the appearance of a European raises in many Asiatic and African countries, and the dangers to which strangers are exposed from the prejudices, ignorance and truculence of the populace, we naturally and justly accept it as evidence of barbarism. But the treatment of the Japanese in this country ought to give us a more charitable view of this subject. It is doubtful if the antrance of an American into any town of the most ex- that it deserved the rebuke of every gentleclusive Oriental countries would be any more dangerous to his property or safety than the appearance of the Japanese would be in any of our large towns, without government protection. They, perhaps, would not be torn in pieces, though even that is problematical; but they would be treated with vulgar familiarity, insulted, robbed, and probably stripped of every thing valuable. When they landed at Washington they were surrounded by a mob which defied the control of the police, and which would have appalled any but the bravest people. They could not appear in public without a guard to protect them from the rudeness of the people; and it is said that in their own quarters they were constantly annoyed by the impertinent curiosity of the best society, and by invasion of their private apartments. The only view which they have had of American society of any grade, is in an attitude of open-mouthed, long-necked, staring, insolent curiosity. The regular official martyrdom, which is the only idea of American public receptions, has exposed these strangers to the broadest exhibition of these American virtues. If the Japanes are readers of Roman history, they mus imagine the public processions in which they are dragged, through every town which they enter, to be in the nature of the Roman Triumphs, in which they are exhibited as prisoners from the conquered people. The jeers and insults of the crowds would perfect this pleasing illusion: and they might reasonably and justly conclude that the long speeches of the municipal authorities, of which they understand not a word, are our boasting over our victory.

At Baltimore the Embassy seem to have narrowly escaped with their lives from the pressure of the mob, and the scarcely less terrible boring of the Mayor and Aldermenand other official entertainers. At Philaadelphia, after reception and speech-making at the depot, they were carried in procession over a route three miles long, during which, in some of the Wards most inhabited by the 'governing classes," the correspondent of the New York Herald says, "The most disgusting and brutal language was used by the crowd. 'Monkeys' and "niggers" were the compliments most popular with the people. the hotel the Princes were placed on the balcony to witness the procession, when a promiscous fight occurred between the military and the police, to the great terror of the crowd. An exhibition of the fire department was made for their benefit but they were crowded from all front positions by the superior anxiety and muscle of their entertainers. The firemen, however, ascended to the balcony and gave them a taste of the humors of Philadelphia firemen, by various pleasantries. When the Embassy retired to their spartments, after this trying entertainment, they found them taken possession of by a throng of municipal officers of various kinds, and it was only by the peremptory demand of the Naval Commission that they

Next day a number of them were sick from the excessive fatigue of enduring American hospitality. The most trying ordeal is yet to be met in the hospitalities of the municipality of New York, compared with which, the attentions which a tribe of Yahoos would bestow on a stranger, would be a high pitch of refinement. It is seriously a question whether these delicately-reared strangers will escape from the country alive. If they do, we may naturally expect that the first movement of their Government, after their return will be to annul the treaty and cut off all intercourse with this country, on the ground that it is not a civilized nation, as it violates all the usages of civilization and humanity in its treatment of Embassadors, and that no beneficial intercourse can ever exist with a people among whom the civilized Japanese can not mingle without periling their lives.

A CANADA PAPER ON SUMBER'S SPEECH. The Montreal Pilot praises Mr. Sumner's The Montreal Pilot praises Mr. Sumner's speech: "It is," says the Pilot, "the boldest and most uncompromising speech on the subject Mr. Sumner has ever delivered, and, judging from the reply of one of the Southern Senators, is looked upon as the most offensive. In vigor of thought and style, the speech can scarcely be surpassed; it is straightforward, direct, logical, proceeding directly to its mark, and, by the shortest line, striking the swiftest and hardest blows, and never for a moment leaving the reader in doubt as to its meaning, while it is enlivened by even more than the orator's usual wealth of classical and historical lore."

An Editorial Critic and an Attron.—
The Hartford, (Coun.) Evening Press, having received the displeasure of a criticised writer of a book, is visited with a letter. Thereupon the editor prints the letter, to show that the author is not a gentleman—quotes a passage from his book to show that he cannot write tolerbly the English language—and concludes by informing him that, though he has, perhaps, the right to be an ass, yet, as an "ungrammatical ass," who thrusts himself before the public, he is an "unconstitutional object." The Legislative and Executive Appropriation Bill was considered.

At six o'clock the Senate reassembled. Mr. Wilson defended the Republicans from Mr. Wilson defended the Republicans from the charge of extravagance, saying that the requirements made by the President and the Departments exceed the appropriations made by Congress. The House was controlled by the Republicans. They had refused the esti-mates of the Administration, while a Demo-cratic Scarte under the control of Democratic mates of the Administration, while a Democratic Senate under the control of Democat senators had added over six millions to the House bills. When such charges were made, he desired to point to the record. He then proceeded to show the necessity for an increase of the tariff for revenue to meet the debts of the Government.

HOUSE—The House proceeded to the consideration of the special order, being the resolutions reported back from the Committee on Expenditures in the Navy Department.

Mr. Bocock, in opposing the resolutions, said the first question was, whether it was right and proper for the House to form itself into a judicial tribunal and pass judgment and inflict punishment on the highest Executive officer of the Government, together with tive officer of the Government, together with one of the members of his cabinet, on exparts testimony taken by a Committee of a past Congress. If they could go back to a former Congress, why could they not go back into all the preceding ones, even to the time of all the preceding ones, even to the time of John Adams? This was the first proposition that had ever been made. The resolutions proposed nothing more nor less than the condemnation and infliction of punishment upon the President of the United States and the the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Navy.

He would not be at all surprised to see the Republicans follow up the steps they have already taken, by the issuance of a warrant to arrest them, that they might be brought to the bar of this House to be censured. The infliction of censure, deliberately and calmly performed, is one of the most grievous acts. The President is independent of the Congress, and the Congress is independent of the President. Each has its legitimate sphere. He did not speak of resolutions of inquiry looking to legislation or impeachment, but contested the rights of the House to resolve itself into a judicial tribunal to inflict punishment on officers of the Executive Department. By what authority was this proposed By what authority was this proposed to be done?

It had been suggested that the next thing It had been suggested that the next thing would be to censure the Supreme Court of the United States for the Dred Scott decision. He would not be surprised to see this done at any time, as it would be pertinent to the programme. The censure of the Secretary of the Navy, contained in the resolutions, was not, he argued, sustained by the testimony; nor had the President ever interfered with the award of contracts. Mr. Sherman spoke at some length in advocacy of the resolutions referring to the testimony in their support, and arguing that the House has power to pass them. He concluded by moving the previous question, which was seconded, thus cutting off Mr. Sickles, who had risen to reply to Mr. Sherman's remarks, so much as referred to the Brooklyn Navy-yard.

Mr. Holton, having the floor to close the debate, yielded it a short time to Mr. Millson, who argued that the Committee on Expenditures in the Navy had no right to resume the case where a defunct select committee had left off. It was a most dangerous precedent, certainly a mischievous one for one Congress to revise the evidence reported to a previous one, when this House can not have control over the committee by which the evidence was reported. It was not sought to condemn or censure Executive officers, who have no opportunity to defend themselves.

Mr. Holton argued that the House had a right to pass these resolutions; by the vote just taken this was determined by an over-

Mr. Holton argued that the House had a right to pass these resolutions; by the vote just taken this was determined by an overwhelming majorify. The Secretary of the Navy has sent a letter to the Committee, speaking of its gross and manifest usurpation, and of a clear and palpable violation of the Constitution in connection with this investigation. with than dr. Holton then referred to the testimony, to show that the resolutions were abundantly sustained, and ought to be passed.

Mr. Bocock moved to table the resolution. Negatived 65 to 120.

The first resolution, condemnatory of both the President and Secretary of the Navy, without a count of the number voting on either side, was carried.

The second resolution that the contract made by the Secretary of the Navy in September, 1858, with W. C. M. Swift, for the delivery of live oak timber, was in violation of law, and in a manner unusual, improper and injurious to the service, was adopted. Ayes 119; nays 60.

The third resolution was read, that the dis-of Congress, is destructive of discipline, corrupting in tendency, and highly injurious to the probic service. Adopted; 123 to 61.

The fourth resolution, that the President and Secretary of the Navy, by receiving and considering the party relation of bidders of contracts pending elections, have set an example dangerous to the public safety and deserving the reproach of the House, was adopted; 116 to 61. Recess from half-past four to saven.

CINCINNATI, June 12, 1860.

HOK. B. M. BIRHOY, HOK. B. STORKE, RUYUS KING
AND OTHERS—GENTLINEN: YOUT favor, containing a request for the reproduction of the Floral Concert of last Friday evening, is received. That a desire so flattering as that of which you speak should exist is very gratifying to me. I am more than pleased if any efforts that I have made to encourage the young of the city to musical emulation and improvement have secured the kind regards of my friends or the friends of public schools in Cincinnati.

As to the reproduction of the entertainment, I shall be most happy to accede to your request, and I shall be most happy to accede to your request, and I shall accompany it with new leatures of interest and attraction. It will, however, be eminently proper that it should occur at or as nearly as peasible to the closing of the public schools, to take place in a few days.

I sm. goulamen, with high regards,

Very truly yours,

L. W. MASON.
